Job description

The Strategic Alliance (STA) GIZ–Allianz–BIMA is a collaboration between the Deutsche Gesellschaft für Internationale Zusammenarbeit (GIZ) GmbH, Allianz SE / Allianz Climate Solutions and BIMA. The objective of the partnership is to support vulnerable communities across the globe in strengthening their risk management plans in relation to climate & health. The project has three components spread across various countries.

In Morocco and Ghana with the support of Allianz, the project does groundwork preparations for implementing risk transfer solutions within an Integrated Climate Risk Management approach. The Integrated Climate Risk Management highlights the importance of risk transfer mechanisms, like insurance, in averting potentially large amounts of economic loss. The approach is applied to industrials parks and SMEs in Morocco and urban setting in Ghana.

In Ghana, along with BIMA, the project is implementing a mobile insurance that offer customers financial protection in the case of sickness, disability or death. To incentivize the use and uptake of the product, the project is prototyping additional services through traditional and digital channels.

In India, the project works with partner Medicount Digital Health Management Solutions to incorporate a Value-Based Care (VBC) approach to offer customers a holistic response to their medical needs.

The candidate will serve as an interface between the diverse team, offering support on various project tasks in relation to Climate and Health Risk management with special focus on insurance. Additionally, the candidate will be mentored by GIZ advisors, will take responsibility for specific components as well as gain insight into other projects of the financial systems development and insurance unit of GIZ.
