‘Turbulence and Power Shifts in Politics’

16 – 26 March 2020

arrival / departure: March 14 / March 27

About the Programme

We invite you to apply for the first winter school on ‘Turbulence and Power Shifts in Politics’ at the Geschwister-Scholl-Institute of Political Science of the Ludwig-Maximilians-University Munich (LMU Munich). The programme takes place under the patronage of the Chair of Political Systems and European Integration administratively supported by staff of the Munich International Summer University (MISU).

It has become common ground that we are currently living in a time of epochal change. Politics has become more instable, unforeseeable and erratic in the national, European and international contexts. In a nutshell, politics has become turbulent.

Power shifts occur and turbulent politics in the different political arenas might even reinforce each other. The Winter School addresses today's turbulent times and power shifts asking what turbulence is, what drives it and how does national, European and international politics react to it. Sessions will be held by established scholars who analyze turbulent politics and power shifts from the perspective of history, international relations, comparative political science, communication science and sociology. The winter school thereby relates to the broader debates on the future of Europe, international power transitions and recent academic accounts analyzing institutional change in national and international contexts.
